

City of Key West Annual Report 2017

City Manager's Office

Jim Scholl, City Manager

It's been a year of huge challenges and huge successes, and I'm pleased to introduce the City's annual report. 2017 tested City government's ability to respond to a disaster, and -- as difficult as it was -- the City was more than up for the task. Without skipping a beat, we prepared for the storm, then moved quickly to ensure the safest fastest recovery possible for the City.

In addition to cleanup and the other visible aspects of returning the city to normal after Hurricane Irma, the financial followup is vital. The City continues to work diligently to ensure the reimbursement of expenditures necessary for our recovery to be sure that the burden does not fall on our local taxpayers.

I'm proud to say that each department within in City was successful at providing the essential services while staying within stringent budgetary guidelines. As your City Manager, it's up to me to ensure that we fulfill our responsibility for the public's welfare, and continue our obligation of fiscal responsibility with taxpayers' money.

Though you'll see that Hurricane Irma affected each of the City departments, we made many other strides during the year. We started the year by cutting the ribbon on our new City Hall, which ended up serving as an ideal Emergency Operations Center for the hurricane. We completely revamped Cozumel park and saw the first event at the Truman Waterfront Amphitheater. We launched the Duval Loop, a free downtown bus service aimed at easing parking and street congestion problems.

The City staff has accomplished many challenging tasks over the past year. Please take a look at the ways that we, as your City government, work to provide the safety and the necessities that better our island community.

New Key West City Hall

The City Commission, on January 2, 2017, celebrated the grand opening of the Josephine Parker City Hall at Historic Glynn R. Archer School.

The magnificent, newly restored historic school at 1300 White Street now houses City offices, providing efficient and easily-accessible customer service to the residents of the island. Generations of Conchs were educated and worked in this building, and will continue to utilize this landmark for generations to come.

“This is a wonderful moment in Key West history,” said Mayor Cates during the ribbon cutting, noting that the new City Hall “was built by the citizens of Key West almost 100 years ago, and it has been restored for the citizens of Key West for at least the next 100 years.”

This beautiful new City Hall is the new center of City government located in the center of town and housed in the 90-year-old

Glynn R. Archer School. The renovation of the school reflects the best of the historic building with the modern convenience expected of a full service government hub. The renovation was completed by Architect Bert Bender and Burke Construction.

Hurricane Irma

On September 10th, Key West came face to face with our worst nightmare: staring down the barrel of a potential Category 5 hurricane. The storm came upon us quickly, providing a small window of decision making for officials and residents alike. On Sept 5th, officials called a local state of emergency. Mandatory evacuation orders went into effect almost immediately: visitors on Sept. 6th and residents on Sept. 7th. Businesses closed down, gas stations ran out of gas and closed, the hospitals closed. By the afternoon of the 9th, the remaining several thousand Key West residents and a handful of emergency responders hunkered down while the winds grew stronger.

As soon as the wind died, first responders were out assessing the situation, clearing roads and checking on those who were in shelters. Public safety is the first priority after a disaster. A skeleton staff of fire, police and public works staffers stayed through the evacuation and immediately went to work. A myriad of blocked roads had to be cleared so that fire, rescue and police could respond to emergencies.

Water, electricity and communications were all affected. It's been over a decade since the City had a mandatory evacuation, but our emergency management Incident Command System served us well. Department directors changed hats, rolling into 12-hour shifts and working vital roles in our incident command structure. They manned phones, called back essential personnel, cooked meals.

Key West's military partners were essential for a rapid response. The Navy, U.S. Coast Guard, National Guard, U.S. Army and many others deployed support immediately. A multi-agency strike force moved in offshore, the amphibious ready group including the USS Iwo Jima, which was visible from Smathers Beach as it brought in personnel and support. The Navy hosted camps on base to ensure that recovery workers did not put added stress on a compromised infrastructure. At one point the repurposed cargo ship Empire State was brought into the Truman Harbor and housed FEMA and other recovery personnel. Military partners raised temporary communications towers at City Hall to get tattered communications back up and running.

As the days progressed, support flooded in from all over the nation. Local businesses worked overtime to ensure that food, water, and fuel were available for evacuees when they returned. Weary linemen and aqueduct workers toiled sunrise to sunset to get water and electricity up and running. The effort was Herculean, and intermittent water and electricity were flowing within days of the storm.

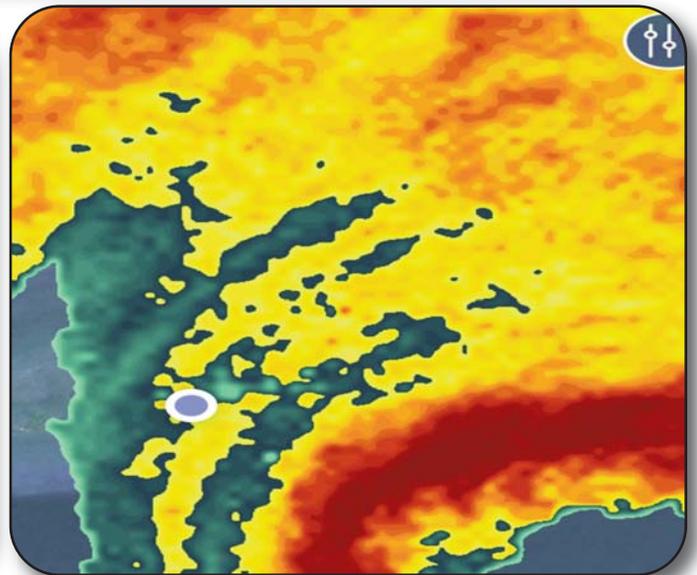

While the Middle and Lower Keys continued to struggle -- and still are struggling -- with the aftermath of a much larger impact than that sustained by Key West, the island city made a conscious effort to get the destination up and running quickly. Opening the economic engine of our tourism industry was vital in the entire region's recovery. Much of the industry workforce lives in the Lower Keys, and without work, recovery would be much slower. The effort began with a single cruise ship -- tourism that would bring income without putting undue stress on the infrastructure. The city was officially deemed "open for business" on October 1st.

Historic Cemetery

Key West's unique cemetery lies in the heart of Old Town. With over 100 interments annually, the cemetery remains extremely active. Within the fenced area, over 80,000 people are interred. A great deal of research has been done in order to digitize the burial records for all 19 acres of the historic cemetery. Department Accomplishments

The completion of the renovation and restoration of Cozumel Park was a major undertaking for the Community Services Department, and it was a huge success. The basketball court was refinished, all new playground equipment was installed, a bathroom was added to the park, and an artificial turf field was included in the park. Also, the City added its first splash pad to Cozumel Park. The splash pad was a major undertaking including the installation of a 20,000 pound underground tank and the pump/filter and plumbing to run an 11-feature splash pad. All the hard work was worth it, as the splash pad has become an overwhelmingly popular activity for the children and parents of Key West.

Big improvements were also done to Poinciana Field. The sidewalk was removed and new sod put down. This gave new and additional field space to youth soccer. The City is always looking to provide additional field space and this was a great opportunity to do just that without any major disruption to the use of the field.

The holiday wreaths on the street lamps are a local favorite. This year we were able to purchase and wire wreaths to complete Duval St and Caroline St. This made for a very festive appearance for the downtown area.

One of the most astounding accomplishments was the work done in the aftermath of Hurricane Irma. The hard work and dedication the workers put forth was nothing short of incredible. The main thoroughfares in the City were cleared by noon the day after Irma hit. All roads were passable within two days after the storm. The Community Services Department worked tirelessly and selflessly to get the City of Key West back up and running. Community Services kept vehicles fueled and running for all agencies, as well as keeping generators running and fueled. They accomplished all of this and more while staying through the storm and being away from their families. Never was there a time to be more proud of the Community Services Department than during this event.

The Community Services Department is committed to doing everything it can to maintain and improve the great City of Key West, and we look forward to continuing to do so in 2018.
